Another outbreak?

It has come to our attention that there have been a number of confirmed cases of either Equine Influenza or Equine Herpes Virus 4 infections in Medicine Hat, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario. All of these viruses cause transient respiratory disease, with some cases worsening into upper airway infection.

Infection with Equine Influenza virus is common, and is thought to be the cause of up to 50% of respiratory viral infections. EI often results in a decreased appetite, fever, a dry cough, and may lead to an increase in nasal discharge that can often be associated with a secondary bacterial infection. These secondary infections often require treatment with antibiotics, and can cost over $200 for treatment. Most horses can recover from this infection within 1-2 weeks.

Equine herpes (rhinopneumonitis) virus has multiple forms, with the most common types being EHV-1 and EHV-4. EHV-1 is the more severe of the forms, causing upper respiratory tract disease, abortion and possibly neurologic disease. EHV-4 infection is limited to the upper respiratory tract and can be spread by aerosol or direct/in-direct contact. There is the potential for animals infected with EHV to become latent life-long carriers, and shedding of the virus may occur during times of increased stress. Diagnosis can be achieved through a nasal swab.

PREVENTION:

Prevention of spread is key to limiting these diseases. Clean hands and tack when at arenas. Do not allow horses to share water buckets. Isolate all new horses. Vaccination and boosters are recommended (at 6 weeks and 6 months). Cost of vaccination is approximately $40.
